Time Puts Out an Issue Today on Bombing Halt

In a departure from its publication schedule, Time magazine is putting out an issue today with a cover story on President Johnson's order to halt all United States bombing of North Vietnam. The magazine normally appears on Tuesday.

The last issue, with Mayor Lindsay on the cover, would have normally remained on sale until Tuesday morning. In revising its publication plans, the magazine is sandwiching two issues into the week so that it may come out with an early election issue next Friday.

Newsweek magazine will keep last Tuesday's with caricatures of the three Presidential candidates by David Levine on the cover—on the newsstands until its election issue next Thursday. The magazine's international edition will appear on schedule, reaching subscribers next Monday and featuring the bombing halt as its cover story.
